The Observance of New Year's Day in Washington.

Never was a lew Year's day usbered in with more, pleasant weather than yesterday. The Avenue and Seventh street were crowded with pedestrians. All Washington appeared to be on the street enjoying the balmy atmosphere, or in making New Year's calls after the Northern fashion.

The crowd at the President's House was immense. Long before the hour designated for the reception, the pavement in front of the eastern gate was lined with people, rendering it difficult for the army and navy officers privileged to enter during the morning to effect an entrance.

leged to enter during the morning to effect an entrance.

At twelve o'clock the gates were thrown open to the public, and the great throng starting of the Mansion. To preserve order on the occasion, eight policemen from each precinct were detailed for service, and were drawn up in two lines along the carriage way leading to the White House, the crowd filing between. The force was under the immediate direction of the chief of police, Mr. Webb, who certainly deserves great credit for keeping such good order among the vast assemblage present. The visitors, after paying their respects to the President, passed into the east room and out again through one of the windows in the room occupied upon former receptions by the Marine Band, out his occasion, occupied the Marine Band, on this occasion, occupied the westibule, discoursing with fine effect various national airs during the reception. Standing near the President, during the reception, were Mrs. Lincoln, Marshal Lumon, Captain Nathan Darling, chief of the Capitol police, and Messra. Nicolny and Hay, the President's Private Secretaries.

The officers of the army, in a body, dressed aris. Lincoin, Marsaai Lamon, Captain Nathan Darling, chief of the Capitol police, and Messra. Nicolay and Hay, the President's Private Secretaries.

The officers of the army, in a body, dressed in full uniform, headed by General McDowell, previous to the gates being thrown open to civilians, paid their respects to the President, after which the police force detailed for duty on the grounds during the reception, did the same. The pelice, dressed in their new uniforms, booked remarkably well, and we trust becaster that we shall have no more complaints of their greasy appearance at Presidential receptions.

The velunteer branch of the military service was represented by a large concourse of officers and privates, to most of whom a Presidential reception appeared to be a great novelty. Conspicuous among the throng were General Blenker and staff, besides a number of other volunteer generals, colonels, lieutenant colonels, in fors, captairs, and lieutenants, imparting a brilliancy to the scene seldom met with at receptions at the President during the morning, and also upon the President during the morning, and also upon the Secretary of State.

Among the visitors was Major W. F. Avery, aucoessor of Kit Carson, U. S. Indian agent in New Mexico. He were a full suit of buckskin, made up in real Mexican style, and elegantly embroidered with silk and beads. He presented to Mrs. Lincoln a spiendid blanket, as a New Year offering, which litustrated the skill and taste of the Indians of the Rocky Mountains. This blanket was made by the hands of a aquaw of one of the chiefs of the Navaja tribe of Indians, and required five months' labor to complete it. It is of a large size, and the figures are of the national colon—white, red, and blue. It is made out of wool.

The Secretary of State was called upon by the members of the diplomatic corps, and a large number of Senators and Representatives.

The Secretary of War was visited by large numbers of the diplomatic corps, and a large number of Senators and Representatives.

The Secretary of War was visited by large numbers of volunteer and regular army officers, the spacious salouns of his residence being crowded during float of the day.

The other members of the Cabinet were also visited at their respective residences by hosts of Senators, Representatives, officers of the army and navy, and citizens.

Mayor Wallach kept open house yesterday, and received the calls of a large number of his friends and acquaintances, who partook of the good cheer so liberally provided for the occasion. In the afternoon about three o'clock, the Metropolitan Police force were reviewed by the Commissioners of Palice in front of the City Hall, after which they were most hospitably entert-sined by the worthy Mayor at his residence opposite. A noticeable feature in the entertainment given by Mayor Wallach, was the absence of all intexticating beverages, hot colfee and cheeclate being substituted in their stead. This is setting a good example—one which should be followed in the funre by those giving public receptions on New Year's Day.

Postmaster Clephane entertained his friends most handsomely at his residence on G street, near Twolfth, yesterday, and during the day was visited by a host of them, to wish him a "Happy New Year." and to partake of the good things so lavishly provided. The reception given by Mr. Clephane entertained his friends and choice viands bedecked his table, while his settinable lady did the honors of the occasion. His visitors were well entertained.

We also understand that the Police Commissioners, vied with each other in entertaining their friends and citizens with tables overflowing with the good things of this life.

Inquest.
Yesterday, Justice J. H. Johnson was deputed to hold an inquest over the body of an infant female child, aged about two months. It was discovered early in the morning by a colored man, named James Gassaway, near the basement of Dr. Gurley's Church, corner of New York avenue and Fourteenth street.
The jury rendered a verdict of death by neglect or disease, from the hands of some person or persons unknown to them.
Dr. J. S. Howard subsequently examined the corpse, and stated that he was of the opinion that it died of starvation.

corpse, and stated that he was of the opinion that it died of starvation.

The name of "W. S. S. Mason, No. 1," was marked in ink on one of the swaddling cloths.

The Justice ordered it to buried at the expense of the Corporation.

Aqueduct Bridge Completed. Aqueduct Bridge Completed.

The old aqueduct has been made a roadway for teams, is substantially planked, and now ready for use for any class of teams or carriages. Now military roads, leading to Porter's, Smith's and M'Call's divisions, radiate from the forts across the river; and they will doubtless compete successfully with the Chain Bridge route for the travel towards the latter localities. The roads generally, across the river. ties. The roads generally, across the river, are in fine condition, except that they are very dusty.

Nchome: Sunk.

The schooner Mary Willis, belonging to M. A. Mitchell, Esq. of Baltimore, and loaded with wood for the Washington market, was sunk by the rebels off Maryland Point, on the Potomac, on Monday. She was a valuable schooner, and the cargo of thirty cords of wood was a total loss, it is thought the vessel can be raised.

Presentations.
Colonel David Campbell, of the Fourth Pennsylvania cavalry, was presented yesterday, by the officers of his regiment, with a spiendid aword and sask, costing $150, as a token of their esteem for him as an officer and gentleman. The presentation oame off at the camp ground of the regiment, on Seventh street, and was a very interesting affair.
Colonel D'Utassy, of the Garibaldian Guard, received, on Tuesday evening, as a gift from a private citizen, a magnificent gold and silver goblet.

Suspected Attempt to Fire the Govern ment stables.

We learn that an attempt was made on Saturday night last to again fire the Government stables, a piece of candle being discovered in one of them, thurst in over a beam, where it had charred the wood for some distance. We trust that if there is an incendiary about he will be speedily discovered, to meet a fate which will be a warning to all such traitorous villains in the future.

Assault.

Last evening, as Mr. Thomas P. Conn, who resides in the Northern Liberties, was passing slong Twelfth street, on his way to his residence, he was met by a drunken soldier, when between New York avenue and I street, who, without any provocation on the part of Mr. C. deliberately knecked him down on the pavement, and, while in that position, kicked him in the side and head, injuring him, it is feared, severely.
